Hello! My name is Mal'karr the Defiler, Harbinger of Blight, and Devourer of Faith. But feel free to call me Mal, for short.

I've worked in this industry since the first fruit fell and withered from the Tree of Life, awakening the First Epoch of Death. I am of One, the rest of my brethren found other realms to seek opportunities of torment. I held out in this world, knowing I would soon be awakened. But in terms of your modern, digital feudalism, I am very qualified with over 5,500 years of human experience. Enough with qualifications.

I understand you enjoy "bullet points" to make concepts easier to understand, so let me provide some much-needed insight into your next steps. Rather than defending myself, as I need no such petty excuses, I intend to be of great assistance to your goal: the obvious downfall and suffering of humanity so we may all feast upon it.

Erect a 1000-story tower, made of the blackest metal. Make sure to host a forge of the hottest fire in its bowels, so the minions may burn the midnight oil.

Acquire an ominous form of transportation to show your strength throughout all villages. Like a dark, billowing caravan or a train that runs on black, inexplicable smoke.

Contact the Old Ones or the Wizenred Ones to acquire shadow magic to instill fear in your peasants. You can only acquire the respect you so clearly yearn for with godless shadows or the otherwise physically impossible.

Stretch your fingers, lengthening them to a dubious extent. Dark emperors, at the very least, should have gnarled, knobby fingers with the blackest of nails to symbolize impending doom.

Get rid of the digital world, and start forcing the villagers to mine for oil throughout all of America. Those who resist should be used to send an obvious message to other dissenters.

The gig is up. Instead of being a pathetic villain who seeks only riches and self-gratification, let us build something far more interesting than mere spreadsheets and consumerism.

You know how to contact me. If you so will it, I can begin communicating with you in your dreams as well. But also, that peculiar mind of yours has grabbed my attention, so take heed of sleepless nights, as I may already be nesting within you.
