General Comment

Deepfakes are a serious problem and are only going to get worse. If you want good publicity and a bipartisan initiative to bolster support, why not create legislation banning them or limiting them in some way? I am a democrat but still tentatively see some of what the Trump administration is doing as positive. The democrats are angry because the Trump administration has ripped out the guard rails around AI. This could be a free way to lessen the hatred from democrats towards the Trump administration. When selling the legislation, use examples like deepfakes used to exploit women, especially underage girls, and to exploit the financial markets by impersonating influential people. No respectable person is going to vote against this legislation except under the guise of freedom of speech. However, there are already hate crime laws, so there is leeway in this area.
