General Comment

Any AI Action Plan the NSF develops must say that companies cannot use works made by other people or entities to train their models without explicit opt-in permission. I am a full-time editor and a hobbyist writer - I need to feel secure that the books and whatever else I work on will not be essentially stolen and analyzed by any random company's AI model without permission and compensation. Some authors and artists might allow their works to be included in these models and others won't.
