General Comment

Artificial intelligence has already affected so many people within and without the creative sphere that these regulations have become unfortunately necessary in a world riddled with scammers and grifters and other people willing to use artificial intelligence to cheat the system. I'm afraid that, as a creative person and a friend of creative people that their livelihoods will be negatively effected by this procedure, and I hope that they can still live in a world that values human creativity and talent over what's fastest and what makes the most money. If these regulations truly are going to dissolve, then you have opened pandora's box, filled with nothing, but people who want it again, the system and screw over people who actually care about what they're making. I beg of you. Please do not take away that experience from the world
