General Comment

AI is poison for creative industries, and doesn't provide any worthwhile service beyond stealing. People have been shown to divest away from AI technologies (As is the case with market share data for the iPhone 16, and Windows 11) showing that the market is trying to say they're unneeded. However Silicon Valley needs this grift to go on, despite it not providing any more value than a search engine.

I doubt this will have any serious thought put towards this comment, so I would just like to add: If AI gets free reign to train it's models on private citizen's independent properties, then I'm ignoring all copyright laws going forward and torrenting anything I want. Since giving AI free-reign would prove these copyright laws are valueless.
