General Comment

Commercial AI products, such as text, image, and video generators are a transparent attempt to steal jobs from hard-working American citizens. By consolidating the income that would be going to many workers, such as professional artists, accountants, and designers into a small set of companies who have fewer employees will only further stagnate the economy. These people buy groceries and gas here on American soil. The companies don't. Most of the employees and infrastructure these companies do have is outsourced to foreign countries (including China). The server equipment and labor are cheaper there and there's no hope of catching up in a timely manner. The AI industry will bleed American dollars that would otherwise be circulated domestically out into global markets. Allowing these bloodsucking bastards to keep operating unchecked on American soil isn't putting America first.
