General Comment

Google and OpenAi both know where all the court cases on their GenAi models infringing on our rights are headed, and how badly it's going to go for them. Their only resort? Entirely destroy legal systems that are in our constitution in order to get away with their theft of creative works. And that's exactly what they asked the White House to do, in recent comments sent by these companies.

Both Google and Open AI want fair use exceptions for training of Generative AI. Meaning they can continue to scrape the entire internet and beyond, taking the works of multiple industries, and using that work to their benefit, to profit from, for free, legally!

It's essentially gutting IP laws we rely on and making the laws useless as Big Tech devours everything.

Both Google and Open AI link to China as threat on this issue, Open AI even claiming China has "free rein" over data. A laughable claim as:

1. The unethical training data of most GenAi models used worldwide were made in the US, UK and EU.

2. China is regulating GenAi models and doing more than the US is concerning infringing models!

It gets more dystopian.

Open AI knows its gonna lose their lawsuits so not only do they want the US government to destroy legal systems (copyright) in the constitution in order to get away with theft, they also want to oversee and seemingly control all ongoing legal cases and domestic policy discussion. (See images for quote excerpt and link of Open Ai's submission)

An outrageous overreach, and a subjugation of both our legal and civil rights.

No joke IF they get this, the US will likely face irreparable harm as pivotal creative economies and copyright dependent industries (which is a LOT bigger than just creative economies) crash.

Please protect our copyright laws, they are there for a reason.
