General Comment

Please protect the rights of American citizens, and do not allow these tech giants to infringe upon the copyright of independent creators. AI companies should be pouring research and development into creating training models from scratch. They want to make an easy buck and use the works of others to skip this step, and to create a product that they can then sell for profit. If google and open ai gave access to their models for free, that would be more fair. But open ai for example is charging between $20-$200 for a model that they've trained on copyrighted material. There is no question that this is not theft. Please do not give these companies special treatment and allow them to do something so unconstitutional.

I am soon to be a self-published, and to think after 6 years of hard work, on pouring out my soul just to create the best work possible, it makes me sick to think it will just be devoured by an ai. That's not fair to anyone, and these corporations should not be given special treatment to be allowed to do so. I beg that you please protect americas artists as this feels like a direct attack by tech companies. Thank you for your time and consideration.
