General Comment

I'm an artist: have been since I was a child, and will be until whatever far-off day I die. Ever since the introduction of AI programs, primarily such programs as generative AI, most folks I know and have studied with -folks I know to be some of the most earnest and hardworking folks on the planet- have been out of work since. I have been unable to find work ever since I graduated due to companies opting to replace my work with AI. If you demolish things like privacy and copyright at the behest of big companies in the name of beating out some other country in a useless race to the bottom of the barrel, you'll be putting millions of Americans out of work and collapsing an entire part of the already fragile economy and, god forbid, whatever confidence remains in living in this country. Do you really want the death of the American arts to be on your hands? Can you fathom being covered in all that blood and having death breathe cold down your spine? For once, do the right thing and do the smart thing: don't bother with investing in AI.
