General Comment

As an author of historical, I oppose the premises of this plan in strongest possible terms. Weakening copywrite protection for the explicit purpose of allowing AI to turn out non-copywritable works will be a massive, and almost irreparable blow to the US economy.

Even if we accept what is being proposed at face value, it's requesting a plan to destroy the country's future ability to create artistic works, which powers the very AI the plans supporters are trying to create. This is nothing more than a proposal to eat our seed corn.
