General Comment

America has been a leader in so many creative fields, whatever media you can name, we've been the leaders. But if you pass a law that says AI can scrape all that copywritten material, we will lose all that. Nobody will want to come here for their businesses when they know that they could just have their material stolen. Not to mention AI has been proven to be wildly unpopular with customers, almost every study into the subject have found that customers find products that use AI to be cheap and they're less likely to invest in it. Pull back on the AI, there is still time, and considering how much AI is costing companies, it's no wonder why every study has said that this is a bubble that is likely to pop. Pull back on AI, stick with the copyright laws we have, and we can keep America at the top of the tech world while everyone else chases trends.
