General Comment

I do not believe that generative AI has any future in the arts, humanities, or sciences in the United States. These technologies are used to take jobs away from hardworking American people, creating a lower quality product at the expense of talented Americans. Often, their original and copyrighted works are used without knowledge or consent to create these programs. The United States should take a stand with talented, hardworking writers, artists and other creators to create legislation limiting the use of generative AI and ensuring artisans retain the rights to their original intellectual properties. The United States should remain a global leader and set a positive example for others worldwide.
