General Comment

We desperately need to keep following the laws we have in place already. I don't trust this administration to do so, but as an artist I have to comment on this.

These tech companies just realise that they can't keep up their content theft if they can't break copyright laws. We shouldn't just break those laws in response and allow them to use that material when other people get in trouble for even just posting clips of snippets of the same material. Doing this without the input of people who create things is also such an awful thing because it would greatly invalidate anyone who is in the arts.
