General Comment

Like NFTs and "the metaverse" before them, LLMs and GenAI are another worthless big tech grift. The current administration knows it, and everyone knows you know it. These misinformation vomit machines are creating a bubble that will burst, likely to hilarious economic consequences for the very same corporations pushing them upon the masses. Additionally, though these things can't reliably replace human employees, many Americans have lost jobs to AI already. This will only get worse without strict regulations on how companies are permitted to use AI. If I'm wrong, and it actually is a profitable technology fit to replace human workers, then how about you buck up and provide Americans who lose their jobs with universal basic income, using the surplus profit generated by AI. Otherwise, tell Elon and his buddies to quit trying to scam us.
