General Comment

I see this and all I can say is who does this benefit. It surely does not benefit the average person. Anything they create or idea they have is now no longer theirs it's the AIs and the tech who created it.

Who profits from this? It surely isn't again the average person. Anything created digitally or posted online means the AI can just take it at anytime with no warning or prompt from the user they are doing so. They won't ever be given a cent for their time, hard work or passion that went into their project while the tech company that took it can profit freely off of it. That's not right. We know that's not right.

I am sorry but when I see this all I can think of is those that have to balance a 9-5, barely able to afford rent and taking risks out there to create some beautiful things in the world to try to make a name for themselves, to try to crawl their way out of what may have been an endless cycle of failures. A little hope to maybe have something out there that the world will see.

And then I see this being the very foot to stomp on all of it. To mock and ridicule to mostly say they don't matter and they never will. That only the strong and survive. That only those with money can own anything even our own soul.

So if you pass this. Why even bother to do anything in life? It'll a very clear statement that those that lack wealth should just work forever in factories until the day we die. Any creativity we have belongs to the wealthy and only the wealthy.

So go ahead. Prove it. Prove that we are not the land of the free and the land of opportunity. We are just the land of 'It's just business'
