General Comment

Allowing companies to freely use citizens data the public did not consent to give is an enormously large breach of privacy and copyright law. We have the right to be the sole proprietor to our ideas whether they be in written, visual, or audio formats. Granting permission to these companies scraping data would severely hinder the American small business to flourish. How would new ideas be presented to the market if the AI of these larger corporations scrapped the idea from an internet forum or even private Word documents? They would eliminate competition. My name is Natalie and I do not believe companies and corporations should be allowed to train their AI programs on my writing, artwork, photography, or any other content produced by me.
