General Comment

AI has no place in the future of the US, and should not be allowed special treatment when it comes to bypassing copyright. The previous executive order was important to ensure that companies can't take the work of regular citizens without payment and use them for commercial gain. The removal of Biden's order 14110 is an extremely hostile action towards artists in particular, whose jobs are threatened by large companies seeking to use AI as a free replacement for their work. I would argue more regulations on AI are necessary, rather than fewer, as companies are already getting away with unethically sourcing data without consent for such projects. This attempt will only make such action more aggressive.
