General Comment

AI is a blight on information, research, art, and ethics. It is a gift for the 1% to have access to skill without putting in the time and effort, paying only a fraction of the cost to companies who own the datasets, while not having to pay the human creators whose work was used for training without their consent. Funding would be better spent actually going towards the arts, education, and scientific research as well as paying artists, writers, and programmers more for their work.
