General Comment

As an artist who struggles to make a living and wants there to be a fair competitive environment, I believe that it's necessary for there to be policies that keeps creative in mind. I believe there needs to be protections that allows artists to thrive without the fear of their work being used for generative AI models, and have copyright laws heavily enforced. There at the very least a form of consent necessary. If this demands were to be ignored, that would cause an economic downturn and negatively impact the careers of many creatives including, but not limited to: illustrators, painters, voice actors, and musicians. Generative AI encourages employers to consider not hiring real people, and limiting job opportunities. The policies I suggest would allow there to be job opportunities that do not infringe on a creatives work and helps avoid disparaging creative job market.
