General Comment

My name is Brandon and I am a photographer by trade whose photos have been used for AI training models against my will and have never received any apology or compensation for it. My issue with any AI technology is the push to build these models without any consideration of ethics. The promise of AI models to help with the future seems to eliminate any form of human expression rather than be used as a tool to help with progress in fields like science or technology. AI as I have seen it be used has only been to replace, rehash, and stagnate the progression of cultural production. AI at this point seems to be more of a buzzword and pump-and-dump scheme for tech minded individuals to make a quick buck as a novelty. There is no regulation over this industry and it desperately needs it.
