General Comment

Imagine this: China, a country known for it's bootlegs and counterfeits that infiltrate the American market, taking advantage of reduced copyright protections in the US to make money on ALL American Made intellectual and creative properties without permission or compensation to the American people; feeding their AI and generative AI machines to create products and propaganda to use against the American people. Or imagine a foreign power, any foreign power, that hates The United States, taking advantage of reduced copyright protections to create false evidence to criminalize, falsely imprison, and manipulate Americans just trying to live their lives. Altering or getting rid of copyright for the sake of AI learning is so dangerous for that alone, but even then: there are plenty of American individuals, small businesses and large corporations/organizations that need their copyrights, trademarks and other intellectual and creative property to be protected - because how would they be expected to actually make money and profit off of their work if copyright becomes worthless since anything can be scooped up and fed to a machine? We can't protect American jobs and American wallets without copyright protection!
