General Comment

AI does not have any benefit to the American people whatsoever and will only cause undue harm to millions upon millions of Americans. The wanton spread of AI is damaging any and all creative industries in the country, and left unchecked, it will completely destroy them and the lives of the creators involved. Copyright law exists for a reason and absolutely must be enforced. The reckless and malicious theft exhibited by AI companies and models must be reined in and their creators punished. Weakening the protections that American creators have in place (that need to be enforced) will not only ruin lives and the creative force that American artists are in the world, it would also enable foreign entities to easily steal from them as well. This plan to weaken the protections American creators have won't even serve the purpose of securing American dominance, as foreign entities would be able to use the wealth of American creative work to likewise fuel their own AI systems and completely outpace us. No matter how you spin it, the American people will lose everything if this moves forward in any fashion.
