General Comment

As a professional artist and educator, the power of AI to use work in the public domain as well as modern artist's without their knowledge is incredibly alarming. The images artists create are their livelihood - this includes their own "artistic style" or how they create them, the way they look. Any training AI receives from an artist's work is essentially taking their individual style for monetary gain. It should be illegal through copyright laws.

I know illustrators whose income has been cut more in half due to the unauthorized use of their style in training AI, and then selling those images for commercial use (in some cases nearly identical to the artist's work). This is a huge overstep and infringement on artists's rights.

AI is a powerful tool that I'm sure can do some good, however it is already doing great harm to the art sector by replacing the work and livelihoods of hard-workin on Americans. Please regulate AI in a way that preserves the image and creative rights of artists.
