General Comment

There's nothing like a home cooked meal. Tireless hours in a kitchen, learning the right timing with spices and ingredients to create a bold taste for yourself and others to love and enjoy. A home cooked meal to a fast food quick fix is no comparison.

The quality not only matters, but the driven passion and learning skills of a trade like art, of any kind, is fundamental to society and connection with the human race. If AI is allowed to freely steal others efforts, we will be left with nothing but empty quality and hollowing of humanity. This isn't an exaggeration, please sit back and consider these words. They weren't written by AI, typing right now is a human being with a passion and a plea: Our technology is surpassing our humanity, where money and convenience is more sought after than connection and the human experience.

Please reconsider for the value of quality, connection and efforts of creation.
