General Comment

The Federal government should not consider broad support and empowerment of private sector actors who have not yet demonstrated sufficient need nor demand for their generative AI products. It is against the interests of the American people to gamble with tax, energy, and ethics so that generative AI actors can figure out what sticks to the wall.

If anything, we need regulations that protect American interests against harvesting and training on personal data and intellectual properties. Regulation against how generative AI is used in the private and public sectors should also be considered.
