General Comment

As a freelance illustrator who makes his livelihood through the creation, distribution, & development of digital art, the “AI Action Plan” is not only poorly founded, it’s dangerous. I don’t want Sam Altman and his ilk running rampant over copyright for the careless exploitation of others’ creativity, as it’ll only lead to further exploitation of artists & a needless waste of energy that AI already attempts.

Altman is fleecing the American public with a rose-tinted view of AI’s potential that doesn’t measure up to what his company uses it for; it profits off of theft and gives little back to people who could benefit from it. Do NOT let him sucker you in with his lies about copyright being an “obstacle to freedom”; it’s a guardrail meant to keep rich types like him from exploiting the working class.
