General Comment

As an artist who's work has been scraped to train AI without permission or recompense I find it deeply insulting that the government would consider eroding copyright further. This technology was built on the theft of our hard work. Why should AI companies be exempt from paying for the works they are using? I'm not. I can't just use another artists' work without permission and/or payment. If AI is Trident as powerful and beneficial as they claim they can do the moral and legally right thing and pay for content like everyone else.

To undermine artists' rights is to attack their work, their livelihood, and the future of art and culture. Why would anyone create anything if it can be legally stolen by a company?

Please, be the voice of all the artists not represented by tremendous wealth. We just want to be able to create without being robbed.
