General Comment

AI has been proven time and time again to be pure theft from those who create any kind of art, such as writing and painting. Additionally, AI that has been implemented by businesses, such as airlines and telecommunications companies, is not helpful to those who require assistance and actively works against the businesses interests at times. AI is a genuine safety concern and should not be so hastily pushed upon the American people or those of other countries as it could lead to serious consequences towards the well-being of the public.
