General Comment

AI should be beholden to our copyright laws else it will be used as a loophole for infringement. Allowing AI to circumvent such protections would destroy all creative fields within the US as, even now, creatives are being laid off in favor of AI generated alternatives despite their poor reception. Allowing this to pass would kill creative careers. Why would creative talent work in the US if someone is just going to steal their content, remix it instantly, and sell it for profit? Why spend years honing a craft for someone to type a prompt and make a quick buck?

I hope you'll reconsider how terrible this would be for creatives, the economy, and the environment.
