General Comment

I am a student of the arts, currently earning my bachelors in studio arts; I'm an illustrator and painter (digitally and traditionally), a seamstress, a sculptor and an author. The artwork me and my peers create should be protected from AI's grasp.

Generative AI models are built on theft, disregarding artists copyright, then butchering the fruits of their labor and stitching the corpses back together into soulless digital image. Artists receive no compensation for their contributions to the models, these contributions often include their entire library of work, personal and commissioned for larger productions. When an AI model trained on an artists work is chosen over the artist, America loses iteration, creativity, and progress of any kind. If AI is allowed to become the dominant tool of creation over our own two hands we will stagnate.

DO NOT, loosen AI companies responsibility to source permission to use copyrighted materials to train their models. Artists deserve compensation for their contributions to society at large.

Protect American artists and American art.
