General Comment

AI holds no place whatsoever in America. It exists only to steal work from the worker to generate a profit where we are not obligated to be paid. Art, Music, Literature, Film; all these forms of expression are unique to the human experience, and cannot be made without the human soul - even if you manage to develop a replica, it is one of unfeeling and unthinking stone. It experiences and expresses no love, no joy, no thought, no desire, no inspiration, no beauty. It is an industry meant to ride the train of potential into a self-cannibalizing factory that was built on biting the very hand it feeds from, and will eventually consume those who unwillingly fed it whole; before it must turn upon itself. I ask you this: When AI has nothing left to take from because it's only remaining resource is other AI, will it create something new? Of course not. Because AI cannot create. It can only replicate what came before, without the care and consideration put into it. It is an inherently flawed system, and not only is it an inherently flawed system, it is one built upon theft. All of these things are ultimately irrelevant, and I should not need to justify them to you. To uplift AI is to step on the necks of those who built the very garden it seeps into and rots like a weed, wilting the man who worked and will not see the fruit of his labor, or the artist who painted and saw a machine produce a poorer version; grasped ahold of in wonder because the work was made by an unthinking, unfeeling ghost, not a man nor woman who put their passion and love into it.

Artificial Intelligence is the enemy of the Human Spirit, and if I cannot appeal to you on this merit alone; I appeal to you on potential faith: To Sin is not something unknowable and complex, it is to treat people as objects. To uplift these objects over the people they take from is to embody evil in it's purest form.
