General Comment

The technology described is not artificial intelligence. The technology described uses existing language and and statistical probability to generate output. It remixes existing human creations, nothing more. And it does so by clear violation of copyright protections.

In addition to military and economic power, this country dominates the world with our cultural strength. Our books, our movies, our music, our television. That culture is protected by copyright. Giving permission for anyone with this breed of technology to devour and spit out poor imitations of our culture is asking the rest of the world to step over us and make cheap copies of what makes America great. Only Americans can produce America. Not machines, or outsiders, and certainly not machines paid for and run by outsiders.
