General Comment

The current laws in place not only protect individualism and creativity, but shareholder IP as well. If this is relinquished, the incentive for companies to continue creating works without their safety net will be compromised.

Furthermore, there should actually be stronger laws enacted to protect the American people from threats of their livelihoods being scraped and regurgitated. This will decimate not only morale, but potentially jobs as well.

AI has its place, but to relinquish our work and information just to stand a chance against international markets is outrageous.
