General Comment

Absolutely not. Why does a business get a free pass to steal from everyone's property, but everyone else would get arrested for such behavior? The only ones who would benefit from this is Open AI and large corporations who already seek to look for reasons en masse to fire everyone in the name of giving money to shareholders. Copyrighted material is there to protect the most vulnerable and giving it a free pass opens up a can of worms that eats everything and leaves nothing for others.

This is a terrible idea devoid of foresight and will even harm other companies whose only protections are their copyright protections. If mass people were and are punished by the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, then why can't one company be held liable in the same way, unless it's to support hypocrisy?
