

PUBLIC SUBMISSION

As of: March 21, 2025
Received: March 15, 2025
Status: [REDACTED]
Tracking No. m8a-wdvl-ibs7
Comments Due: March 15, 2025
Submission Type: API

Docket: NSF_FRDOC_0001

Recently Posted NSF Rules and Notices.

Comment On: NSF_FRDOC_0001-3479

Request for Information: Development of an Artificial Intelligence Action Plan

Document: NSF_FRDOC_0001-DRAFT-3861

Comment on FR Doc # 2025-02305

Submitter Information

Name: J Jones

Address:

Email: [REDACTED]

General Comment

As an artist, I find any technology that requires massive theft to be a technology not worth supporting. This technology, which again, requires theft from existing human creators, is already being used to push artists out of working roles with creations that in any other context would be called plagiarism. Technology should exist to make the human condition better, not to destroy livelihoods and steal another's hard labor- that is not what America is supposed to be about, is it?

The worst part is that there would be no end to this- the AI database can not just be filled once and it is 'complete'- it requires constant feeding of fresh content. That means not a one time theft of other's works and intellectual property, but theft in perpetuity so that the model doesn't collapse on itself. That alone should tell you that these 'AI' models cannot create anything new and that their 'creativity' is an over-hyped exaggeration based on the ability to regurgitate images and text- it must be constantly kept fresh by filling it's databases more and more. It doesn't get 'better' the more you add, it just has more of the same to throw back at you without you realizing that it's doing the same thing repetitively. Anyone who's worked with generative AIs can tell you that this is exactly the case.

There is no positive benefit of this technology that doesn't only appeal to a niche group of grifters who are already predisposed to lying to the public about what they can produce and appealing to corporate desires to cut creatives out of the equation. There is no benefit to America or the American people.