General Comment

Current AI operations are a full threat to not only copyright writ large, but all American culture and arts businesses and communities. Many AI companies struggle to find a use for their technology that produces any profit at all, this simply hasn't proven to be a theater of any value yet, hardly different from trying to make America dominant in the field of solitaire. Empowering these AI organizations in the wrong way will gut our culture and art as AI scrapes them all while struggling to find a path to profit. The technology has some incredible promise, but not if it means gutting the arts and culture we've built in this long American history.
