General Comment

Copyright protections absolutely must be preserved. The medium or end user, and their intentions are not relevant and do not override the rights of the copyright holder. No material should be used without permission, and stronger enforcement should be applied to those companies or entities that have already used or continue to use materials without permission. In cases where laws may be unclear they should be reworded to prevent any loopholes or misinterpretations that are used to justify the use of copyrighted material with permission.
