General Comment

Destroying copyright law for the sake of AI companies will decimate the entertainment and publishing industries, including textbook publishing, which will have a catastrophic effect on American higher education. Please understand that "AI training" is AI remixing, and AI gets things wrong constantly.

We are the global leader in movies, TV, music, and books, but if AI companies get their way, we will not be in the future. That's because if everyone's creative work can be stolen and remixed, creative people cannot make a living doing their work. In the long term, this is bad for everyone, including AI companies, because if no one is producing new creative work, the AIs will start training on themselves and the quality will degrade.

Copyright protections against AI are essential to keeping the American economy from going into freefall, and the economy is very fragile already.

Sincerely,

Bryn
