General Comment

"but following copyright law is haaaaaaaaaaaaard" isn't an excuse any other industry can get away with, and yet we're supposed to buy it from AI companies because their visual-hallucination machines are just SOOOOO important? Gimme a break, they aren't that special and they shouldn't get any kind of exception to laws.

If their technology is THAT amazing, THAT important, THAT revolutionary, THAT profitable, they can pay to license works like everyone else is supposed to. There's not supposed to be a "but you have to let me break the law, the thing I'm doing is cool!" exception.
