General Comment

If this plan goes through and OpenAI is given full freedom to steal from whatever it wants, it will not only cripple the livelihoods of artists and creators everywhere, but it will also result in a cultural landscape that is less unique, less creative, less rich, and less enjoyable. If OpenAI becomes a dominant force in the creative industries, the art and media we consume will become homogenized until it ceases to have all meaning.

People already complain about the state of the film industry, but imagine how much worse it will be if ChatGPT frankensteins every script together into an incomprehensible mess.

People have complained about the idea of "bread and circuses," and how the current administration doesn't even seem interested in allowing us to have those. The least they can do is not allow OpenAI to strangle the arts and media that we do have.
