General Comment

I strongly disagree with the idea of allowing AI to scrape copyrighted content. It should only be legal if the artist consents.

AI is not the future, especially not for anything creative. People want art and stories that have soul. Art that has a touch of the artist in it, that authentic glimpse into the human experience. AI will not and never will have that, and audiences will know it.

I don't want my tax money going toward AI in any way. It's a waste of time, energy, and both taxpayer and shareholder money. It won't improve the quality of life of the American people, and that's more important than beating China in this pointless technology race.

We should be focusing this energy on healthcare and education if anything, not AI.
