General Comment

Giving OpenAI immunity to any copyright lawsuit will open the floodgates for copyright infringement for any other AI company looking to make money by stealing the works of or pretending to be artists or companies. It is, fundamentally, a threat towards the ability of copyright holders to protect themselves and their IPs. Imagine how far this could go - if OpenAI gets a pass, then AI image generators could come next, and a bootlegger could use the likeness of any character they wanted by simply generating images of them with AI.
