General Comment

As an artist and software developer, generative AI models have vastly impacted my fields (and experience in these fields) for the negative. My own artwork has been scraped without my permission (or knowledge, until I was informed by others and found it being used in some models) for faceless corporations to steal and churn out to others - all without my permission, much less any financial compensation. It's theft, pure and simple. If you cannot make a large-scale language learning model without using media without permission, then you cannot make a large-scale language learning model. That's theft.
