General Comment

This is a private, for profit company demanding the right to steal everyone else's intellectual property just so it can make money for itself. There is no useful application for this technology, if there were they wouldn't be insisting they wouldn't need to do this, they'd just apply it and make money like every other company does. there is certainly no applicability to national security, infrastructure, the economy at large, or any other facet of the public good.

If a company can only survive by stealing from everyone, then it shouldn't survive.
