General Comment

As an author, AI has negatively impacted by livelihood. It has stolen authors' and illustrators' copyrighted works, and the big tech companies have repeatedly admitted they have to steal our work for their AI models. It would be a travesty to the creative fields in the U.S., fields that innovate and entertain, if OpenAI were given immunity from copyright laws. This is theft, and they should not be allowed to destroy the livelihood of so many U.S. citizens.

Studies have also shown that AI searches are wrong a large percentage of the time. We should not let the works of hard-working people be stolen for a subpar product that is overhyped, inferior, and unethical.
