General Comment

Generative 'AI' as it exists currently is a tool that relies on mass plagiarism in the form of data scraped for training models. If any artistic endeavor, whether by an individual or a corporation, is to have any recourse against the unwanted use of their work without compensation or even credit in return, gen-AI must be subject to copyright legislation at the minimum. Otherwise, it will be impossible for people to retain ownership of anything they expend their time and effort to create.
