General Comment

The wording of this document feels like it's trying to purposefully confuse people.

Putting it bluntly, AI should not be used to REPLACE people. It should be used to HELP people. The way it's said here, and the way it's said in many other places, just feels like a way to "make things cheaper for big companies" and allows them to actively steal artwork, music, etc. just to train an AI to do what humans spent their entire lives learning to do.

Artwork, music, and any form of creative freedom should not be stifled by the petty theft of big corporations wanting to nickel and dime their way out of paying actual people livable wages.

IP (Intellectual Property) is a term that states that whatever someone created is under their name as THEIR creation. AI for the purpose of making art/music creation models is only stealing that stuff. Whoever puts a prompt into an AI is not actively creating something new, they're requesting for an algorithm to rip out the very thing that makes art "art" and turning it into just another piece of filth that has no soul behind it.

When an artist adds something to music or to a drawing, there's intent behind what they do. There is a REASON for them doing that. The AI systems used for this do not understand that in any way, shape, or form. They just do the algorithm they are told.

In closing, allowing AI to freely steal artwork of others to train itself is infringing on many artistic rights, IP protections, and copyrights. Those were put in place to protect artists from the EXACT THING that is trying to be made legal right now - Art theft.

Please, for the love of decency, we have so little left to be stripped from us. Why do you need to keep taking more away?
