General Comment

As an artist and an author, I deserve to be paid for my copyrighted work just as I pay others for their contributions to it. This is already a machine that is running well where people pay us and we pay others. To throw our hard work into a churning plagiarism machine without compensation to be regurgitated in bits and pieces of AI work is wrong.

For decades, authors and artists have had recourse, which has been established by laws and courts, to be compensated. This is a system built by the people for the people. AI is built upon the people, illegally using copyrighted works of people, designed to cut out people.

Additionally, it will open up staggering amounts of lawsuits as snippets of copyrighted works appear in AI plagiarized fabrications. This has already proven to be happening. (See articles on the Omegaverse appearing in AI fabrications.)

If AI cannot exist legally and ethically, without damaging lives, the environment, and livelihoods, we are not ready for this, and should not be funding AI as a nation. I'm a citizen of this nation, and I should be able to have a say in whether I want to toss everything I've made into a machine to be churned out as plagiarized jumbles of mediocrity.
