General Comment

As a hobby artist who wishes to make a career with my art in the future, I wish to let the word be known that this proposed regulation is nothing more than destructive and insulting towards creative American citizens. To allow these corporations to freely train their AI programs to copy what artists do for a constructive and inspiring living is nothing short of undermining the potential of great storytellers within the entertainment industry, corporate and independent. Generative AI is simply a smoke-and-mirrors scheme to steal from creators of visual art, animation, music, cinema, video games, print, television, and beyond, in order to cheapen the many facets of media our nation absorbs on a daily basis. If generative AI is allowed free reign by corporations to commit blatant theft for the sake of lining their pockets with additional and, might I add, undeserved profit, I can promise you the public, including myself, will push back, or fight back, against this decision, should it come to pass.

Generative AI has zero moral or legal standing within America or any country in the world. I say no to any and all form of AI in the context of learning and producing.
