General Comment

I don't believe that I, a Canadian (not American) citizen, should have to work 20+ hours of my life to create an artwork for a private project within my own country, only to have it taken to train AI in the United States of America with zero compensation or credit for my time, ability, education, or experience. If you cannot build a model that runs on consensually aquired data, your model shouldn't exist at all. Why does Mr. Altman get paid for my independent work? Why can Open AI train its model on my independent work for profit? Why do you insist on ignoring international copyright laws, as though your country is the only one to exist?
